Education and Life-long Learning

What do you want out of life? A good future? Money? It can all be accomplished, you just need a good education. With an education you gain new knowledge, skills, learn independence, responsibility, and will have a successful life.

New Knowledge and skills can be gained from an education. In school, you learn some important and interesting information and also some new skills. If you want to learn more about an interesting topic, you can continue learning on your own, and see where it takes you in life. The skills you learn can be applied outside of school as well, for example, you can use math equations to help you out if you want to drive somewhere really quick. Plus, you gain respect by teaching others with the knowledge you learn.

An education can teach you independence and responsibility too—not everything you learn comes from books, but can come from your own life. You'll learn to be organized with notes, and how to manage time for homework or studying on your own. From an education, you become more focused, and may even set goals for yourself that you want to accomplish. You'll be able to take care of yourself and become more confident in the decisions and choices that you make.

After all that you've learned, you may want to continue learning, and you may end up with a successful life. Choose the career that you've always wanted, and you'll become rich with money if you have an education. Use the money to buy the things you've always wanted—you deserve it from learning so much and working hard. Learning can still go on. Look how far it can get you. By learning, you gain more power and become even more successful. The sky's the limit!

Knowledge, skills, responsibility, independence, and success can be all yours. You just need to have an education and the will to learn. Learning will always move you a step up in the world. That's why it's good to be a life-long learner. Socrates has said that "there is only one good, that is, knowledge, and there is only one evil, that is ignorance.” This means that education and life–life learning leads to a good life, where without those things, you go down the wrong path. It’s all true you know.
