What is an education? Education is knowledge. Knowledge leads to great accomplishments in life. Socrates once said “There is only one good, that is knowledge; and there is only one evil, that is, ignorance.” A lack of education leads people down the wrong path. Education is part of who we are.

Imagine what life would be like if no one had knowledge. Maybe people would sieze to exist. If people didn’t go to college to get jobs, then who would take care of everything. If there were no policemen to put criminals in jail, murderers would be loose. If firefighters didn’t do their job because they had no education on how to, many people would die. Diseases could attack the human race without having any doctors to stop it.

Education can bring so much good into the world. Maybe if everyone in the world had an education, we could stop global warming or put an end to pollution. Education is very important because it saves lives. For example, if the world’s best surgeon never bothered to get an education, many lives would be lost. For most people education is important because they want to make a difference.

Although having an education is a good thing, there are a few hardships. For example, when your a doctor you can’t always save a patient’s life. Or if your a firefighter sometimes you can’t put the fire out in time. You also have to pay for your college education. Sometimes getting an education is hard work, but its worth it in the end.

In conclusion, learning has its ups and downs but really the world would be so much worse without an education. To most people, an education is very important. If you make a big difference in your life with your education, you can be remembered in history. No matter what the difficulties of getting an education, its always worth it in the long run.
